

Leslie Slip Lookout Park, 12 Leslie Street

Indigenous Community Sharing Meeting #2

This spring, CreateTO and the design team heard from the Indigenous community about their vision for the new Leslie Slip Lookout Park, a proposed new public park on the Toronto lakeshore near Tommy Thompson Park. They heard about the importance of honouring the fire, honouring water, and including Indigenous design concepts into the Lookout itself and incorporating public art.

At this meeting, members of the Brook McIlroy Indigenous Design Studio will join the Landscape Architecture team to present ideas to you, the Indigenous communities of Toronto. We are asking for your feedback and further ideas on how this park can be a welcoming, vibrant Indigenous place.

Join us for an Indigenous Community Sharing Meeting reserved specifically for First Nations, Métis and Inuit.

Wednesday, December 1, 2021

6:30 p.m. – 8:30 p.m.

Online or by phone

Who should attend?

- Indigenous community members
- Indigenous families and waterfront park users
- Representatives of Indigenous organizations and agencies
- Motivated and creative Indigenous people who want to contribute to place-keeping

The Indigenous Community Sharing Meeting will feature:

- A background presentation on park development
- A presentation from the Indigenous design team
- Opportunities for questions and answers
- A follow-up Indigenous place-keeping dialogue

About Leslie Slip Lookout Park

Leslie Slip Lookout Park will be a new destination in Toronto's Port Lands. The park will include a public beach, distinguished by forested dunes creating a new multi-use community destination in Toronto's east end. The open space will provide the public with dramatic views of the Toronto skyline.
